The Soldier's Bouquet.

The following, a southern exchange says, the result of the "poetical agony" of a Georgian while in camp near her father's residence: Accept this bokay from a feller.
Who oft has heard the kamons beller;
Has listened to the files a tooten.
And helped to do a heap of shootin;
Has seen the war clouds dark wrise.
Like fifty buzzards when they files;
Who is bugger than his dad,
And wants to marry might bad.

Be Strong. Be strong to hope, O. Heart! Though day is bright, The stars can only shine In the dark night, Be strong O. Heart of mine, Look toward the light! Be strong to bear, O, Heart! No hing is vain, Strive not, for life is care, And God sends pain; Braven is above, and there Rest will remain!

Be strong to love, O, Heart! Love knows not wrong; Did'st thou love, creatures even, Life were not long; Did'st thou love God in Heaven Thou would'st be strong. Oh, Had I Known.

BY MARRIET PRESCOTT SPOFFORD. If I had thought so soon she would have died, He said. I had been tenderer in my speech, That day she looked up with her startled eyes, deep;
With kines I had stilled those breaking sighs.
With kines closed thoses eyelids into sleep.
That day she looked up with her startled eyes.

Oh, had I known she would have died so soon,
Love had not wasted on a barren land,
Love like these rivers under torrid neon
Lost on the desert, poured out on the sand—
Oh, had I known she would have died so soon! Girlhood.

With rosy cheeks, and merry dancing curls, Here comes a group to seek my lonely bower, What beaming riadness lights each fairy face. The while the clees advance, Now spreding swittly in a gleesome race. Now whirling in a dance!

What heavenly pleasure o'er the spirit rolls When all the air along.
Floats the sweet music of untainted souls
In bright, unsullted song! The sacred nymphs that guard this sylvan ground

May sport unseen with these,
And joy to bear their ringing laugh resound
Among the chestnut trees! With rosy cheeks, and merry dancing curis,

Life and Death. BY ADELAIDE A PR CTOR. "What is Life my father?" "What is Death, father?"

Save we need fight no more; Who, driving away the demon band, Bids the din of buttle cease; "Let me die, father! I tremble and fear To that terrible strife!" "The crown must be won for Heaven, dear, in the battle-field of life; My child though thy foes are strong and tried. He loveth the weak and small;

Do not crouch to-day, and worship The old Past, whose life is fied; Hush your voice to tender reverence; Crowned he his, but cold and dead;

See the shadows of her heroes Girt around her cloudy throne; Every day the ranks are strengthened By great hearts to him unknown; Noble things the great Past promised Holy dreams both strange and new; But the Precent shall fulfil them, What, he promised she shall de.

His Feeble Mustache BY "HY TYDE." I have watched and waited with patience
For the growth of each baby hair.
I have scanned with a longing eagerness
The strength of the latest pair,
And after painful years of waiting
For its size to be manly and strong,
Have made up my mind it's useless to try
There is visibly something wrong.

I have let it grow for alx months—yes, more; And e'+n then it can hardly be seen Yet still it remains uaked and lean;

I have followed afar with a jealous gaze
The man with more than his share.
I have looked a ranger at kids with their growth
As though I didn't care,
But though to you I may seem contented,
As it I'd nothing to trouble or lear.
